

AT GREAT COST

GENERAL BULLER FIGHTING HIS WAY TO LADYSMITH.

His Troops Performing Heroic Feats and Sacrificing Their Lives Freely Among the Kops and Ravines.

THEY STORM PIETER'S HILL

DRIVE THE BOERS FROM ONE OF THEIR STRONGEST POSITIONS.

And Finally Occupy the Place, After Losing Many Brave Men, Who Faced a Most Galling Fire.

GENERAL BULLER'S ADVICES

HE TELLS THE WAR OFFICE HOW HE TURNED THE ENEMY'S LEFT.

And Praises the Work of His Soldiers, Who Scattered the Boers in All Directions.

FUSILIERS LOSE HEAVILY

ONE COMPANY IS ALMOST ANNIHILATED BY A FUSILLADE.

Two Hundred and Fifty Men Are Killed and Wounded in the Railway Hill Fight—Ladysmith Suffering.

BOERS USING SOFT BULLETS.

Mr. Churchill Says They Are Using Five Kinds of Illegal Missiles.

LONDON, March 1.—Winston Churchill, in a dispatch from Colenso, dated Tuesday, says: "The condition of the wounded was so painful that General Buller sent a flag of truce to the enemy and it was arranged that throughout Sunday military movements should continue on both sides, but there should be no shooting. This truce terminated at dusk. The Boers then resumed a furious musketry attack on the British line. The attack was repulsed. Fighting continued vigorously. We shall see who can stand 'bucketing' best, the British or the Boer."

Mr. Churchill goes on to say that there is abundant proof of the Boers using a large proportion of illegal bullets, no fewer than five different kinds of exploding or expanding bullets having been found. He also asserts that the Boers are employing armed Kaffirs and he adds: "I have always tried to be fair toward the Boers, but, after making every allowance, it must be said that they show, when in stress, a very dark, cruel and vengeful underside of character."

A dispatch to the Times from Colenso says: "Before Sunday's armistice many of the British wounded had been left out for thirty-six hours. The Boers gave them water."

THE RAILWAY HILL DISASTER.

Two Hundred and Fifty British Soldiers Killed and Wounded.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—But for the surrender of General Cronje, which overshadowed the news from Natal, England would be shuddering over the British reverses at Railway Hill, where the Inniskilling Fusiliers were caught in a Boer trap and slaughtered.

Under date of Pieters, Feb. 24, describes the engagement:

"Last night the Inniskilling Fusiliers, mixed with some of the Dublin Fusiliers and the Natal Mounted Rifles, were ordered to carry out a reconnaissance of the railway line between Pieters and Ladysmith. They were under a continuous fire, through which they passed up the heavy broken ground to the first Boer trench. Half way up the hill the Boers retreated to the crest, and then came back on either flank of the Irish troops, enfilading the captured trench with a savage cross as well as a direct fire. The result was a terrible cost. At roll call only five officers and 100 men were answered to their names."

"Colonel Thackeray, Major Sanders, of the Inniskilling; Colonel Sitwell, of the Dublin Fusiliers; Captain Maitland, of the Second Gordon Highlanders; and the Welsh Fusiliers, were killed. Two hundred and fifty-two of the rank and file were killed or wounded."

"General Lyttonell's brigade relieved them at 6 o'clock this morning, when the Boer artillery pounded the troops holding the center kopjes without pause, but with little effect."

LONDON, March 1.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pieter's Station, dated Sunday, Feb. 26, and describing the twelve days' continuous fighting, of which the attack upon Railway Hill by the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers was one of the supreme moments, says: "The Inniskillings joined the column with twenty-four officers. They have five left. That tells the tale. No map, no general account can give an idea of the difficulties of these hills and ridges, which succeeded each other like waves in a heavy sea, one giving way only to another. Each can be enfiladed, and until one is taken it is impossible, even with the keenest scouting, to know what fortune lies beyond it. The military problem changes as the column advances, each kopje refusing to give up its secret until the advancing troops have touched its crest. To add to the difficulty of the terrain, the Boers, under the escort of the City Imperial Volunteers and mounted infantry. Later in the day the remaining prisoners were in charge of the Earl of Eroll and escorted by the Gloucesters and a hundred Imperial Volunteers. The women and children are being sent to their homes."

"I understand that great dissatisfaction was felt by the Boers at Cronje's refusal to accept an offer of safe conduct to the women and children, and medical care for the wounded, 170 of whom are now in a hospital. Every man of them is in a terrible plight for want of care at an earlier stage."

"I inspected the Boers' laager yesterday and was much struck by the ingenuity and energy with which the position was made almost impregnable to assault."

Lord Roberts has forwarded an additional list of the British casualties during the three days' fighting at Paardeberg, showing twelve killed, eighty-two wounded and four missing, and including seven officers and four Canadian privates wounded.

Lord Roberts has also called that Rens-

burg was recaptured yesterday by General Cronje.

Victoria's Thanks and "Boha's" Reply.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—In a dispatch to Lord Roberts, following the announcement of the surrender of General Cronje, her Majesty said: "Accept for yourself and for all under your command my warmest congratulations on this splendid news."

Lord Roberts replied as follows: "All under my command are deeply grateful for your Majesty's most gracious message. Congratulations from their Queen are an honor the soldiers deeply prize."

"THE TURNING OF THE TIDE."

Algernon Charles Swinburne on Lord Roberts' Achievement.

LONDON, March 1.—Algernon Charles Swinburne has a poem in the Times this morning under the caption, "The Turning of the Tide," of which the last six lines are:

"The winter day that withered hope and pride, Shines now triumphant on the turning tide, That sets once more our trust in freedom free; That leaves a ruthless and a truthless foe, And all base hopes that hailed his cause laid low, And England's name a light on land and sea."

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED.

How Lord Roberts Received the Surrender of General Cronje.

PAARDEBERG, Feb. 27 (Majuba day), 3 a. m.—The British camp was awakened by the continued rattle of rifle fire at day-break. The news soon arrived that the Canadians while building a trench quite close to the enemy were felled at a range of fifty yards. The Canadians gallantly worked forward and occupied the edge of the trenches along the river, thereby enfilading the Boer position. The movement was followed by a cessation of the fire except an occasional solitary shot.

NEEDS A ROAD

LORD ROBERTS UNABLE TO MOVE HIS ARMY WITH RAPIDITY.

Will Probably Be Forced to Follow Kitchener's Sudan Plan and Build a Railway.

MESSAGE FROM HIS LORDSHIP

HE SAYS CRONJE AND HIS ARMY HAVE BEEN SENT SOUTH.

Women and Children Who Were Found with the Boers Are Being Returned to Their Homes.

PRaise FOR THE CANADIANS

WHOSE DASH INDUCED THE BOER GENERAL TO SURRENDER.

Roberts' Meeting with Cronje—Total British Loss to Date, 12,834—Rensburg Recaptured.

THE Queen to Buller's Soldiers.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Queen has telegraphed General Buller as follows: "I have heard with the deepest concern the heavy losses sustained by my brave Irish soldiers and I desire to express my sympathy and admiration of the splendid fighting qualities they have exhibited throughout these trying operations."

General Buller has wired his thanks to the Queen for her telegram of "gracious sympathy and encouragement."

BOERS USING SOFT BULLETS.

Mr. Churchill Says They Are Using Five Kinds of Illegal Missiles.

LONDON, March 1.—Winston Churchill, in a dispatch from Colenso, dated Tuesday, says: "The condition of the wounded was so painful that General Buller sent a flag of truce to the enemy and it was arranged that throughout Sunday military movements should continue on both sides, but there should be no shooting. This truce terminated at dusk. The Boers then resumed a furious musketry attack on the British line. The attack was repulsed. Fighting continued vigorously. We shall see who can stand 'bucketing' best, the British or the Boer."

Mr. Churchill goes on to say that there is abundant proof of the Boers using a large proportion of illegal bullets, no fewer than five different kinds of exploding or expanding bullets having been found. He also asserts that the Boers are employing armed Kaffirs and he adds: "I have always tried to be fair toward the Boers, but, after making every allowance, it must be said that they show, when in stress, a very dark, cruel and vengeful underside of character."

A dispatch to the Times from Colenso says: "Before Sunday's armistice many of the British wounded had been left out for thirty-six hours. The Boers gave them water."

THE RAILWAY HILL DISASTER.

Two Hundred and Fifty British Soldiers Killed and Wounded.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—But for the surrender of General Cronje, which overshadowed the news from Natal, England would be shuddering over the British reverses at Railway Hill, where the Inniskilling Fusiliers were caught in a Boer trap and slaughtered.

Under date of Pieters, Feb. 24, describes the engagement:

"Last night the Inniskilling Fusiliers, mixed with some of the Dublin Fusiliers and the Natal Mounted Rifles, were ordered to carry out a reconnaissance of the railway line between Pieters and Ladysmith. They were under a continuous fire, through which they passed up the heavy broken ground to the first Boer trench. Half way up the hill the Boers retreated to the crest, and then came back on either flank of the Irish troops, enfilading the captured trench with a savage cross as well as a direct fire. The result was a terrible cost. At roll call only five officers and 100 men were answered to their names."

"Colonel Thackeray, Major Sanders, of the Inniskilling; Colonel Sitwell, of the Dublin Fusiliers; Captain Maitland, of the Second Gordon Highlanders; and the Welsh Fusiliers, were killed. Two hundred and fifty-two of the rank and file were killed or wounded."

"General Lyttonell's brigade relieved them at 6 o'clock this morning, when the Boer artillery pounded the troops holding the center kopjes without pause, but with little effect."

LONDON, March 1.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pieter's Station, dated Sunday, Feb. 26, and describing the twelve days' continuous fighting, of which the attack upon Railway Hill by the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers was one of the supreme moments, says: "The Inniskillings joined the column with twenty-four officers. They have five left. That tells the tale. No map, no general account can give an idea of the difficulties of these hills and ridges, which succeeded each other like waves in a heavy sea, one giving way only to another. Each can be enfiladed, and until one is taken it is impossible, even with the keenest scouting, to know what fortune lies beyond it. The military problem changes as the column advances, each kopje refusing to give up its secret until the advancing troops have touched its crest. To add to the difficulty of the terrain, the Boers, under the escort of the City Imperial Volunteers and mounted infantry. Later in the day the remaining prisoners were in charge of the Earl of Eroll and escorted by the Gloucesters and a hundred Imperial Volunteers. The women and children are being sent to their homes."

"I understand that great dissatisfaction was felt by the Boers at Cronje's refusal to accept an offer of safe conduct to the women and children, and medical care for the wounded, 170 of whom are now in a hospital. Every man of them is in a terrible plight for want of care at an earlier stage."

"I inspected the Boers' laager yesterday and was much struck by the ingenuity and energy with which the position was made almost impregnable to assault."

Lord Roberts has forwarded an additional list of the British casualties during the three days' fighting at Paardeberg, showing twelve killed, eighty-two wounded and four missing, and including seven officers and four Canadian privates wounded.

Lord Roberts has also called that Rens-

burg was recaptured yesterday by General Cronje.

Victoria's Thanks and "Boha's" Reply.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—In a dispatch to Lord Roberts, following the announcement of the surrender of General Cronje, her Majesty said: "Accept for yourself and for all under your command my warmest congratulations on this splendid news."

Lord Roberts replied as follows: "All under my command are deeply grateful for your Majesty's most gracious message. Congratulations from their Queen are an honor the soldiers deeply prize."

"THE TURNING OF THE TIDE."

Algernon Charles Swinburne on Lord Roberts' Achievement.

LONDON, March 1.—Algernon Charles Swinburne has a poem in the Times this morning under the caption, "The Turning of the Tide," of which the last six lines are:

"The winter day that withered hope and pride, Shines now triumphant on the turning tide, That sets once more our trust in freedom free; That leaves a ruthless and a truthless foe, And all base hopes that hailed his cause laid low, And England's name a light on land and sea."

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED.

How Lord Roberts Received the Surrender of General Cronje.

PAARDEBERG, Feb. 27 (Majuba day), 3 a. m.—The British camp was awakened by the continued rattle of rifle fire at day-break. The news soon arrived that the Canadians while building a trench quite close to the enemy were felled at a range of fifty yards. The Canadians gallantly worked forward and occupied the edge of the trenches along the river, thereby enfilading the Boer position. The movement was followed by a cessation of the fire except an occasional solitary shot.

NEEDS A ROAD

LORD ROBERTS UNABLE TO MOVE HIS ARMY WITH RAPIDITY.

Will Probably Be Forced to Follow Kitchener's Sudan Plan and Build a Railway.

MESSAGE FROM HIS LORDSHIP

HE SAYS CRONJE AND HIS ARMY HAVE BEEN SENT SOUTH.

Women and Children Who Were Found with the Boers Are Being Returned to Their Homes.

PRaise FOR THE CANADIANS

WHOSE DASH INDUCED THE BOER GENERAL TO SURRENDER.

Roberts' Meeting with Cronje—Total British Loss to Date, 12,834—Rensburg Recaptured.

THE Queen to Buller's Soldiers.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Queen has telegraphed General Buller as follows: "I have heard with the deepest concern the heavy losses sustained by my brave Irish soldiers and I desire to express my sympathy and admiration of the splendid fighting qualities they have exhibited throughout these trying operations."

General Buller has wired his thanks to the Queen for her telegram of "gracious sympathy and encouragement."

BOERS USING SOFT BULLETS.

Mr. Churchill Says They Are Using Five Kinds of Illegal Missiles.

LONDON, March 1.—Winston Churchill, in a dispatch from Colenso, dated Tuesday, says: "The condition of the wounded was so painful that General Buller sent a flag of truce to the enemy and it was arranged that throughout Sunday military movements should continue on both sides, but there should be no shooting. This truce terminated at dusk. The Boers then resumed a furious musketry attack on the British line. The attack was repulsed. Fighting continued vigorously. We shall see who can stand 'bucketing' best, the British or the Boer."

Mr. Churchill goes on to say that there is abundant proof of the Boers using a large proportion of illegal bullets, no fewer than five different kinds of exploding or expanding bullets having been found. He also asserts that the Boers are employing armed Kaffirs and he adds: "I have always tried to be fair toward the Boers, but, after making every allowance, it must be said that they show, when in stress, a very dark, cruel and vengeful underside of character."

A dispatch to the Times from Colenso says: "Before Sunday's armistice many of the British wounded had been left out for thirty-six hours. The Boers gave them water."

THE RAILWAY HILL DISASTER.

Two Hundred and Fifty British Soldiers Killed and Wounded.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—But for the surrender of General Cronje, which overshadowed the news from Natal, England would be shuddering over the British reverses at Railway Hill, where the Inniskilling Fusiliers were caught in a Boer trap and slaughtered.

Under date of Pieters, Feb. 24, describes the engagement:

"Last night the Inniskilling Fusiliers, mixed with some of the Dublin Fusiliers and the Natal Mounted Rifles, were ordered to carry out a reconnaissance of the railway line between Pieters and Ladysmith. They were under a continuous fire, through which they passed up the heavy broken ground to the first Boer trench. Half way up the hill the Boers retreated to the crest, and then came back on either flank of the Irish troops, enfilading the captured trench with a savage cross as well as a direct fire. The result was a terrible cost. At roll call only five officers and 100 men were answered to their names."

"Colonel Thackeray, Major Sanders, of the Inniskilling; Colonel Sitwell, of the Dublin Fusiliers; Captain Maitland, of the Second Gordon Highlanders; and the Welsh Fusiliers, were killed. Two hundred and fifty-two of the rank and file were killed or wounded."

"General Lyttonell's brigade relieved them at 6 o'clock this morning, when the Boer artillery pounded the troops holding the center kopjes without pause, but with little effect."

LONDON, March 1.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pieter's Station, dated Sunday, Feb. 26, and describing the twelve days' continuous fighting, of which the attack upon Railway Hill by the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers was one of the supreme moments, says: "The Inniskillings joined the column with twenty-four officers. They have five left. That tells the tale. No map, no general account can give an idea of the difficulties of these hills and ridges, which succeeded each other like waves in a heavy sea, one giving way only to another. Each can be enfiladed, and until one is taken it is impossible, even with the keenest scouting, to know what fortune lies beyond it. The military problem changes as the column advances, each kopje refusing to give up its secret until the advancing troops have touched its crest. To add to the difficulty of the terrain, the Boers, under the escort of the City Imperial Volunteers and mounted infantry. Later in the day the remaining prisoners were in charge of the Earl of Eroll and escorted by the Gloucesters and a hundred Imperial Volunteers. The women and children are being sent to their homes."

"I understand that great dissatisfaction was felt by the Boers at Cronje's refusal to accept an offer of safe conduct to the women and children, and medical care for the wounded, 170 of whom are now in a hospital. Every man of them is in a terrible plight for want of care at an earlier stage."

"I inspected the Boers' laager yesterday and was much struck by the ingenuity and energy with which the position was made almost impregnable to assault."

Lord Roberts has forwarded an additional list of the British casualties during the three days' fighting at Paardeberg, showing twelve killed, eighty-two wounded and four missing, and including seven officers and four Canadian privates wounded.

Lord Roberts has also called that Rens-

burg was recaptured yesterday by General Cronje.

Victoria's Thanks and "Boha's" Reply.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—In a dispatch to Lord Roberts, following the announcement of the surrender of General Cronje, her Majesty said: "Accept for yourself and for all under your command my warmest congratulations on this splendid news."

Lord Roberts replied as follows: "All under my command are deeply grateful for your Majesty's most gracious message. Congratulations from their Queen are an honor the soldiers deeply prize."

"THE TURNING OF THE TIDE."

Algernon Charles Swinburne on Lord Roberts' Achievement.

LONDON, March 1.—Algernon Charles Swinburne has a poem in the Times this morning under the caption, "The Turning of the Tide," of which the last six lines are:

"The winter day that withered hope and pride, Shines now triumphant on the turning tide, That sets once more our trust in freedom free; That leaves a ruthless and a truthless foe, And all base hopes that hailed his cause laid low, And England's name a light on land and sea."

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED.

How Lord Roberts Received the Surrender of General Cronje.

PAARDEBERG, Feb. 27 (Majuba day), 3 a. m.—The British camp was awakened by the continued rattle of rifle fire at day-break. The news soon arrived that the Canadians while building a trench quite close to the enemy were felled at a range of fifty yards. The Canadians gallantly worked forward and occupied the edge of the trenches along the river, thereby enfilading the Boer position. The movement was followed by a cessation of the fire except an occasional solitary shot.

NEEDS A ROAD

LORD ROBERTS UNABLE TO MOVE HIS ARMY WITH RAPIDITY.

Will Probably Be Forced to Follow Kitchener's Sudan Plan and Build a Railway.

MESSAGE FROM HIS LORDSHIP

HE SAYS CRONJE AND HIS ARMY HAVE BEEN SENT SOUTH.

Women and Children Who Were Found with the Boers Are Being Returned to Their Homes.

PRaise FOR THE CANADIANS

WHOSE DASH INDUCED THE BOER GENERAL TO SURRENDER.

Roberts' Meeting with Cronje—Total British Loss to Date, 12,834—Rensburg Recaptured.

THE Queen to Buller's Soldiers.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Queen has telegraphed General Buller as follows: "I have heard with the deepest concern the heavy losses sustained by my brave Irish soldiers and I desire to express my sympathy and admiration of the splendid fighting qualities they have exhibited throughout these trying operations."

General Buller has wired his thanks to the Queen for her telegram of "gracious sympathy and encouragement."

BOERS USING SOFT BULLETS.

Mr. Churchill Says They Are Using Five Kinds of Illegal Missiles.

LONDON, March 1.—Winston Churchill, in a dispatch from Colenso, dated Tuesday, says: "The condition of the wounded was so painful that General Buller sent a flag of truce to the enemy and it was arranged that throughout Sunday military movements should continue on both sides, but there should be no shooting. This truce terminated at dusk. The Boers then resumed a furious musketry attack on the British line. The attack was repulsed. Fighting continued vigorously. We shall see who can stand 'bucketing' best, the British or the Boer."

Mr. Churchill goes on to say that there is abundant proof of the Boers using a large proportion of illegal bullets, no fewer than five different kinds of exploding or expanding bullets having been found. He also asserts that the Boers are employing armed Kaffirs and he adds: "I have always tried to be fair toward the Boers, but, after making every allowance, it must be said that they show, when in stress, a very dark, cruel and vengeful underside of character."

A dispatch to the Times from Colenso says: "Before Sunday's armistice many of the British wounded had been left out for thirty-six hours. The Boers gave them water."

THE RAILWAY HILL DISASTER.

Two Hundred and Fifty British Soldiers Killed and Wounded.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—But for the surrender of General Cronje, which overshadowed the news from Natal, England would be shuddering over the British reverses at Railway Hill, where the Inniskilling Fusiliers were caught in a Boer trap and slaughtered.

Under date of Pieters, Feb. 24, describes the engagement:

"Last night the Inniskilling Fusiliers, mixed with some of the Dublin Fusiliers and the Natal Mounted Rifles, were ordered to carry out a reconnaissance of the railway line between Pieters and Ladysmith. They were under a continuous fire, through which they passed up the heavy broken ground to the first Boer trench. Half way up the hill the Boers retreated to the crest, and then came back on either flank of the Irish troops, enfilading the captured trench with a savage cross as well as a direct fire. The result was a terrible cost. At roll call only five officers and 100 men were answered to their names."

"Colonel Thackeray, Major Sanders, of the Inniskilling; Colonel Sitwell, of the Dublin Fusiliers; Captain Maitland, of the Second Gordon Highlanders; and the Welsh Fusiliers, were killed. Two hundred and fifty-two of the rank and file were killed or wounded."

"General Lyttonell's brigade relieved them at 6 o'clock this morning, when the Boer artillery pounded the troops holding the center kopjes without pause, but with little effect."

LONDON, March 1.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pieter's Station, dated Sunday, Feb. 26, and describing the twelve days' continuous fighting, of which the attack upon Railway Hill by the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers was one of the supreme moments, says: "The Inniskillings joined the column with twenty-four officers. They have five left. That tells the tale. No map, no general account can give an idea of the difficulties of these hills and ridges, which succeeded each other like waves in a heavy sea, one giving way only to another. Each can be enfiladed, and until one is taken it is impossible, even with the keenest scouting, to know what fortune lies beyond it. The military problem changes as the column advances, each kopje refusing to give up its secret until the advancing troops have touched its crest. To add to the difficulty of the terrain, the Boers, under the escort of the City Imperial Volunteers and mounted infantry. Later in the day the remaining prisoners were in charge of the Earl of Eroll and escorted by the Gloucesters and a hundred Imperial Volunteers. The women and children are being sent to their homes."

"I understand that great dissatisfaction was felt by the Boers at Cronje's refusal to accept an offer of safe conduct to the women and children, and medical care for the wounded, 170 of whom are now in a hospital. Every man of them is in a terrible plight for want of care at an earlier stage."

"I inspected the Boers' laager yesterday and was much struck by the ingenuity and energy with which the position was made almost impregnable to assault."

Lord Roberts has forwarded an additional list of the British casualties during the three days' fighting at Paardeberg, showing twelve killed, eighty-two wounded and four missing, and including seven officers and four Canadian privates wounded.

Lord Roberts has also called that Rens-

burg was recaptured yesterday by General Cronje.

Victoria's Thanks and "Boha's" Reply.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—In a dispatch to Lord Roberts, following the announcement of the surrender of General Cronje, her Majesty said: "Accept for yourself and for all under your command my warmest congratulations on this splendid news."

Lord Roberts replied as follows: "All under my command are deeply grateful for your Majesty's most gracious message. Congratulations from their Queen are an honor the soldiers deeply prize."